

T I Graduate Descriptors

An Effective Communicator	An Effective Problem Solver	A Healthy, Skilled, Knowledgeable Person	An Informed, Contributing United States and Global Citizen
Writes correctly, clearly, effectively, and readily, in a variety of personal, social, educational, and career-related activities.	Collects, organizes, and interprets and evaluates information by reading and listening; forms personal opinion and makes decisions applicable to the requirements of daily living, problem resolution, career activity and ecological concerns.	Demonstrates basic fundamentals of good health, knowledge, and skills found / required in the world of work.	Understands the structure and function of federal, state, and local governments and the rights and responsibilities of citizenship and the importance of active community involvement.
Participates effectively in a variety of oral situations: gathering information, entertaining, persuading, listening, and evaluating.	Employs critical and analytical processes when confronted with issues, problems, and decisions and demonstrates the ability to communicate ideas effectively both orally and in writing.	Forms opinion, discriminates between fact and opinion, and recognizes bias in reading and listening situations.	Understands the fundamentals of the American economic system, as well as other major systems.
Enjoys and appreciates a variety of reading experiences and relates to them personally and critically by responding with understanding, sensitivity and insight.	Uses problem solving processes in a variety of personal, social, educational, and career related activities.	Develops skills to express and evaluate personal artistic abilities and forms.	Is knowledgeable of physical and political geography, different world cultures and historical events in order to understand their impact on past, present, and future developments.
Uses communication skills to become confident and self directed learners.	Understands the dynamics of change and strategies for responding appropriately.	Demonstrates a knowledge of the traits and attitudes relating to positive interpersonal relationships.	Understands civic values and cultural / social differences and develops tolerance and respect for others; understands how diversity in American social institutions, traditions, and values has contributed to a unique American Society.

Home